ACCORD HELPS, NOT ENOUGH, PARLEY TOLD

Common Problems Attacked at Conference in Kingston, Ont., June 15.

KINGSTON, Ont., June 15.—The reciprocal trade agreement between Canada and the United States, signed in 1923, is all right so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough, the conference on Canadian-American affairs which was held last night by the W. A. Ralston of Williams-Town, Mass.

The main criticism of the agreement was that it offered that the responsible officials of the two countries moved too cautiously in the enterprise of taking down the barriers to trade between them.

TRADE BARRIERS
The conditions of trade have been considerably improved by a significant reduction of the trade barrier the reciprocal program increase in the trade between the two countries. Where the agreement did nothing at all to improve conditions, it made the proportional increase of imports or exports has been made.

The conference, second of its kind, opened last night and will continue until Friday with discussion of current affairs and long-range plans in relation to the trade between the two countries. The subjects include tariffs and trade movements, financial, international, and trade relations movements, geographical, political, cultural, and trade relations and foreign policy, and the political and economic aspects of trade.

Mr. Moore, Liberal member of the House of Commons, is secretary of the conference. He is also chairman of the tariff board of Canada. Followed Prof. A. L. MacLaren in discussion of tariffs and movements of trade.

Prof. MacLaren recalled the Democratic party, victorious in the United States, in 1932, was on the basis of a reduction of trade barriers and the tariff on the basis of mutual cooperation.

BLAZING METEOR Seen At Montreal

THIRD IN TOTAL OF ESTIMATES

Montreal, June 15.—Puzzled East Montreal residents today told of seeing a meteor with a blazing trail in the sky that seemed to burst high in the air and vanish in a twinkling of an eye.

Dozens of persons saw the meteor, but no two quite agreed on what they saw. One woman said it fell to earth, but another said it was a ball of fire.

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly
Bushranger Under Leather Grand Ends

ALMOST overlooked in the sport news of the past week was a story that fairly dripped background and drama—the death of Bushranger, greatest U.S. steeplechaser of the past decade. Bushranger died under the saddle when his stout heart failed during a morning workout at Belmont Park. If this grand thoroughbred had anything to say about it, he probably would have preferred to pass out that way in full stride under leather. There is always something lush, something of a disappointing anti-climax when a fighter dies in a nightmarish, or a famous horse breaks from the Last Barrier in some lush pasture forgotten and without benefit of a final salute.

But Bushranger went out with hundreds of early morning railbirds watching him go through his paces. Jockey Little was up. Bushranger seemed in normal condition when he was saddled, but after scoring gracefully over the first hurdle, he seemed to lose his fire. He took two more hurdles sluggishly and toppled the fourth. Jockey Little did not see it, but a fatal heart attack had set in. Bushranger undoubtedly felt the deadly sickness sweeping over him, but in his blue-blooded code there was no such thing as quitting. He gathered his muscles and launched himself at the fifth hurdle. It was his last effort. He died in mid-air. The railbirds saw him suddenly spread out, crash head over heels and drop in a limp heap.

The gallant son of Stefan the Great, from the mare War Path, a daughter of Man o' War, died as many another thoroughbred has—fighting to the very end. It is this inherent courage that was the Bushranger's spark from all other horses in the majority of cases, although once in a while you will find a horse without benefit of pedigree whose fighting spirit is just as great.

Bushranger was bred and owned by Joseph E. Widener and his wife, who included practically a sweep of all the major chasing events on the American turf calendar. In 1936 he ran the three miles of the Belmont Grand National in 5:47—just seven seconds short of the track record with a weight of 172 pounds, the highest ever carried by a winner in this event. His 1936 record was four wins out of five starts.

Knew Only One Bull

THE dramatic death of Bushranger recalls a flock of similar stories of lion-hearted horses. The most gripping one is that of how Helianthus responded to the last bell. He fell in a race and broke his leg. He was left with pain when the horse ambulance rushed out and picked him up. As the car moved down the track with the injured horse, the crowd rushed out to get a look at him. The driver sounded a gun, with which the ambulance was equipped, to clear the way.

Helianthus knew only one bell—the starting gun. Although broken with pain, he gave a mighty leap at the sound of the gun, partially cleared the side of the ambulance track, toppled over and broke his neck as he fell to the track.

Broadway Limited died dramatically on the track and around him was made one of the most gripping moments of recent years—"Broadway Bill". The same fighting bull was in his vein that Bushranger had, for he was a son of Man o' War.

Then there was Dark Secret who died winning the Jockey Club Gold Cup a second time. Had Matter been the only other horse to win this event twice. His owner, William Woodward, had been blamed for sending Dark Secret to the barrier in that final race since he was obviously not right. However, Woodward had ordered that this would be his last race and he was anxious to have Dark Secret win fame with a double victory.

A furlong from the finish line, Dark Secret galloped on. One front leg was broken. Yet on three legs he played gamely to the end, but a furious drive by Fairview by mere inches. Across the line, with the thunderous roars of hysterical fans for a fighter's drive, Dark Secret collapsed and passed on.

The story of Dark Secret's gallant win will live for decades among horsemen. His name is expressive enough of the great horses of all time by virtue of that final spectacular effort. If Woodward had not sent him to the barrier that day, he would never have won the Gold Cup a second time. True enough he might have won it a few years later as a pampered veteran at the Belmont track and then passed out quietly and forgotten. His other winnings would not have insured him any lasting fame. His fighting spirit shows he gave without anyone knowing how great it really was. It seems that Woodward did it for the right thing in racing him that day—the thing Dark Secret would have done himself.

Marathon Wrestle Bouts Booked Here for Friday

Six Grapple Stars To Start As Names Are Picked From Hat By Audience

Marathon wrestling, which will comprise five bouts, will be Mike Cutler's presentation at the Memorial Hall this Friday evening with the first of the five bouts scheduled to start at 9:30 p.m.

Remembering, and proven a popular entertainment, is the marathon wrestling, which will be presented by Mike Cutler, a new-comer here from New York. King Kulu, Les Johnson, Nasser Adams and King Clayton, are booked for Friday's show.

The marathon bouts will be more or less picked by the audience, for they will pick the names out of a hat in matching the bouts. First, all six names will be tossed into the hat, and a person in the audience will pick out one fall or 30-minute time limit. Again two names will be drawn and these two grapplers will wrestle to one fall or 30 minutes, whichever the last two grapple.

At the end of the three bouts there will be three winners, and again the hand will dip into the hat to pick out two of the winning trio. The winner of this fourth bout then matched with the remaining grappler, who is more or less given a bye into the last bout. Throughout the card, victories will grapple in one-fall, 30-minute time limit bouts.

Throughout the United States this marathon wrestling has proved a popular style of competition, and with these six brawny grapplers there five battles lineup for the wrestling fraternity here. Featuring the marathon will be the debut of Wallly Thompson, a clever New Yorker who is expected to top the card with his cleverness.

Race Fraternity Prepares For Colorful Ascot Meet

ASCOT, Berkshire, June 15.—The stage was set for Royal Ascot, with its great assembly of thoroughbreds, its rich purses, its gorgeous display of summer fashion, its gay house parties—and all signs pointed to the greatest race meeting in Ascot's 226-year history.

Twenty-eight races—topped by the Ascot gold cup and the Royal Hunt cup—will be run for prizes totaling £10,000. The gold cup, the smallest prize will be £1,000. Hare field, including 18 for the Royal Hunt cup, almost the importance attached to the meeting by stable great and small.

ROYALTY ENTERTAINS
The King and Queen, who are entertaining more guests than have been at Windsor Castle for Ascot since 1914, will drive down the course in an open landau prior to the racing on each of the four days of the meeting. Queen Mary will be absent, but it is anticipated the remainder of the Royal family, kept away last year by court mourning, will attend.

General disappointment was expressed on the announcement that William Woodward's Omaha had gone home and would not renew his rivalry with the City Quashed in the gold cup. Last year Lord Stanley's Quashed won the American-bred Omaha in what was probably the closest finished since White Knight and Kider ran a dead heat in 1907.

But Britain's best stayers nevertheless will be called on to meet a strong foreign challenge from France in the Prince de Falcourt—Luciano's Countess and the Regum Aga Khan's Le Duc, who will try to take the coveted trophy across the channel for the first time since Mastine won in 1904.

The race is over 2 1/2 miles, one of the longest flat races in England, and in addition the gold cup prize money can count on approximately £7,500. It will be run on Thursday.

BIGGEST EVENT
The Royal Hunt cup, the biggest event from a betting standpoint, will be run on Wednesday and thousands are hoping for a coronation year victory for His Majesty's colt Falley, who was backed at 20 to 1 in today's colture of odds at the Victoria club in London.

The King's horse, who will be ridden by Jackie Crouch, is considered a really good chance because of the large field and the fact the course has been altered in such a manner as to favor horses drawing low numbers in the draw for post positions. The favorites, at 15 to 1, are W. Carr's fully bred Andrews and Neal Chavry's Commander. If Carr's horse is allowed to enter Sir Abner, who won the Cup in 1906, and the Lincolnshire winner Marmaduke Jinks, belonging to Mrs. C. R. Robinson, and G. Blarney's Couvert, third favorite at 15 to 1.

McIntosh, Lemieux Lose Doubles After Splitting Singles

McFadden Loses Three Set Argument To McCauley Ace

Roger Waters and George McFadden, Glensora Club ace, became the first pair to retain the Edmonton and District Tennis Association challenge trophy, when they defeated Leo Lemieux and Walter McIntosh of the McCauley club 3 to 1 at Glensora yesterday.

As in previous challenge matches, competition was close and the final outcome hinged on the doubles event.

POPULAR EVENT
This is the first year that this challenge trophy has been up for competition and it is proving a popular event. John Oliver and Harry Kinloch of Glensora were first called upon to defend the cup, to start the ball a rolling, losing it to Shorts Purrell and Tudor Edmunds of McCauley. They in turn dropped it to McFadden and Waters.

Roger Waters was drawn against Leo Lemieux in the singles, while Walter McIntosh opposed George McFadden.

Waters took Lemieux into camp in two straight sets 6-4, 6-2 but was driven to play his best kick in both matches.

After a stiff battle the veteran McIntosh took the two last sets of his match with McFadden 7-5, 6-4 after dropping the first set 2-6. The consecutive doubles were decided the deciding event.

FLYING COLORS
The Glensora couplemen came through with flying colors to mark up a 6-2, 6-3 straight victory.

While the cup trustees weren't definitely sure who would be the next challengers, it is expected that John Oliver and Harry Kinloch will be given a crack at it Sunday.

TENNIS ACES BARRED FROM CLUB EVENTS

City's Best Players Will Not Compete At Stimulus Inter-Club Play

The Edmonton and District Tennis Association decided to bar Edmonton's top-flight players from further participation in the regular inter-club competition in an effort to stimulate play at a meeting held last night.

As a few clubs could always bank on their best stars to win regularly, interest might have waned with this competition, out with this new measure the weekly events are expected to become more popular than ever.

The following players, with home clubs, were singled out and declared ineligible by the association in inter-club play:

Glensora club: Harry Kinloch, John Oliver, Stan Moore, Roger Waters and George McFadden. McCauley: Walter McIntosh and Andy "Shorts" Purrell. Civil Service: Jimmy Hoy.

The Dyde cup competition was also studied at length at the meeting. This event is competed for by four men players, with three doubles and two singles matches being played. It was decided that following the city tournament, the Association would pick a four-man team to travel to Calgary in an attempt to win the cup from its southern pedestal, where it has resided for the last two years.

Special attention will be given junior tennis this year, and much interest is being shown in the first tournament which will be held in the city towards the end of June.

It was brought to the attention of the different club secretaries that they should use it that results of inter-club matches be forwarded immediately after play to W. Caruthers, secretary of inter-club draws. With many startings to make up, it is essential that he receive results within the shortest possible time.

St. Lawrence, the preferred dividend, rose to 90 1/2 in late trading.

The power stocks all showed steady movement to fractional gains against a point loss for the 100-point index.

At New York

NEW YORK, June 15.—Reveries of fractions to 3 or more points produced a steady rise in today's stock market. The 100-point index appeared less of an important factor.

Brokers attributed the quiet come-back partly to quick-traders and some short covering based on the theory the weakness of Monday may have been a climax to the index.

At Toronto
